Customer Journey

Fictional sample data — The First-Home Renovator persona

The data in this document is fictional and provided as a structural reference for the assessment. You may use it directly, modify it, or create entirely new content. The focus is on how you present this type of content visually and interactively — not on data accuracy.

. Customer Decision Journey — The First-Home Renovator

A 5-stage journey covering a first-time ute buyer moving from initial curiosity through to confident ownership. Stages are named for how the customer experiences them, not the sales funnel. Durations and emotional/rational scores are illustrative.

1. The Itch (3–6 weeks)

Doing

Scrolling Instagram renovation content, noticing utes in the background of videos. Starting to feel their hatchback is a bottleneck on weekend projects. Casually looking at listings while in bed.

Thinking / Feeling

"Maybe we should look at something bigger next year?" Curious but not committed. No urgent trigger yet — more of a slow realisation.

Key Touchpoints

Lifestyle content on Instagram Reels; home renovation podcasts; passive glances at showroom yards while driving; peer conversations over coffee.

Experience / Emotions

Emotional 55/100 (curious, inspired). Rational 30/100 (not yet analysing specs or budget).

Barriers

No sense of urgency; feel the ute segment isn't "for them"; partner not yet on board with the idea.

Opportunities

Content that speaks to lifestyle identity, not specs. "First-time ute buyer" welcome guides that reduce the culture barrier.

2. Window Shopping (~6 weeks)

Doing

Openly browsing now. Saving photos, showing their partner, watching long-form YouTube reviews over dinner. Starting to form preferences around looks and features without deep research.

Thinking / Feeling

"This one looks cool." Running on aesthetic gut instinct. Getting excited, occasionally daydreaming about the renovation projects it would unlock.

Key Touchpoints

Video reviews on smart TVs; brand Instagram accounts; peer vehicles parked in the street; visits to hardware store car parks (watching what others drive).

Experience / Emotions

Emotional 70/100 (energised, dreaming). Rational 40/100 (still surface-level).

Barriers

Wide option set is paralysing; partner has different aesthetic preferences; confused by trim-level hierarchies.

Opportunities

Visual configurators that let couples agree on a look. Lifestyle imagery over technical imagery at this stage.

3. Kicking Tyres (~4 weeks)

Doing

Booking test drives, reading owner reviews carefully, asking specific questions about features (reversing camera, tray liners, headlights). Actively weighing shortlist of 2–3 models.

Thinking / Feeling

"Which one actually suits our life?" Shifted from dreaming to pragmatism. Starting to stress about the size of the decision.

Key Touchpoints

In-person dealer visits; owner forums; insurance quote calculators; financial comparison tools; consultations with a trusted mechanic friend.

Experience / Emotions

Emotional 50/100 (dropping as reality hits). Rational 75/100 (serious analysis mode).

Barriers

Hidden costs (insurance, registration, accessories) shifting the budget; feeling pressured by salespeople; overwhelm from too much peer advice.

Opportunities

Transparent all-in pricing calculators. Low-pressure test drive programs ("keep it overnight"). Independent content that isn't from dealers.

4. Signing On (~2 weeks)

Doing

Final negotiations, finance applications, accessory package decisions. Often an emotionally intense fortnight where decisions are made quickly after months of research.

Thinking / Feeling

"Let's just get this done." Pressure to commit is high. Oscillating between euphoria and buyer's remorse in the same day.

Key Touchpoints

Dealer visits; finance broker calls; insurance binders; online ancillary purchases (mats, covers); conversations with family for validation.

Experience / Emotions

Emotional 85/100 (peak excitement and anxiety). Rational 90/100 (every dollar is being scrutinised).

Barriers

Negotiation anxiety; accessory decisions feel rushed; wait-time for vehicle delivery creates post-deposit doubt.

Opportunities

Clear "next 30 days" onboarding comms post-deposit. Named support person to reduce anxiety during wait time.

5. Road Testing Life (First 6 months)

Doing

Using the vehicle for every project they imagined. Learning its quirks, discovering features they didn't know about, comparing notes with their peer group. Starting to evaluate whether the decision was right.

Thinking / Feeling

"Was this the right call?" Mostly pride, with occasional moments of doubt when something minor goes wrong. Eager to justify the choice socially.

Key Touchpoints

Ongoing service visits; owner community apps; social media showing off the purchase; dealer follow-up touchpoints; roadside assist experiences (hopefully minimal).

Experience / Emotions

Emotional 75/100 (pride, belonging). Rational 60/100 (evaluating ongoing costs vs expectations).

Barriers

Small niggles feel catastrophic in the honeymoon phase; servicing surprises erode trust; feature-discovery curve takes longer than expected.

Opportunities

Welcome-experience app with feature tutorials. Proactive first-service engagement. Owner community programs to reinforce belonging.
